DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

This application currently names joint inventors. In considering patentability of the claims under 35 U.S.C. 103(a), the examiner presumes that the subject matter of the various claims was commonly owned at the time any inventions covered therein were made absent any evidence to the contrary. Applicant is advised of the obligation under 37 CFR 1.56 to point out the inventor and invention dates of each claim that was not commonly owned at the time a later invention was made in order for the examiner to consider the applicability of 35 U.S.C. 103(c) and potential 35 U.S.C. 102(e), (f) or (g) prior art under 35 U.S.C. 103(a).

Claims 1 to 11 and 24 to 30 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Reade et al (Appl. Phys. Lett. Vol 80).

The Reade et al reference teaches a method of creating a superconductor, note entire reference. On a metal substrate, which is flexible, an amorphous layer is first deposited. The layer can be yttria-stabilized zirconia. The amorphous is then subjected to an ion beam treatment; where oxygen is a component of the beam, page 1353. The temperature of this treatment is 60°C. The beam hits the layer at an angle. The layer is then converted on the surface up to 10nm, to a biaxially textured material, page 1353. Then a superconductor is deposited onto on the layer, page 1354. The sole difference between the instant claims and the prior art is the angle of beam. However, in the absence of unexpected results, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to determine through routine experimentations the optimum, operable angle of incident in the Reade et al reference in order to create the texture uniformly over the surface.

Claims 12 to 23, 31, 32, and 27 to 42 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Reade et al (Appl. Phys. Lett. Vol 80).

The Reade et al reference is relied on for the same reasons as stated, supra, and differ from the instant claims in superconductor and its use. However, in the absence of unexpected results, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to determine through routine experimentations the optimum, operable superconductor and use in the Reade et al reference in order to increase the effectiveness of the structure.

Claims 14 to 17, and 33 to 36 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.
